Stress & Adrenal Support

Stress management and adrenal support can be an important foundational aspect of a holistic wellness protocol, as it can impact many other vital body systems, such as sleep and immune and digestive health. Stress can be thought of as the demands on us that push our ability to cope with them. While these are most often mental and emotional, we also need to consider physical stressors including cold temperatures, loud noises, and noxious stimuli. The combination of these various stressors, especially when experienced long term, can have a profound impact on our overall wellness, leading to a lack of energy, mood changes, and decreased mental performance. Because of these far-reaching impacts on one's overall health, it is important to understand the tools to help patients safely manage stress and its impact on the hypothalamus-pituitary-adrenal (HPA) axis.

Our stress and cortisol response is governed by a complex feedback loop that starts in the brain with the hypothalamus and pituitary. The glands release chemical messengers that tell the adrenal glands how much cortisol to release in response to normal physiological needs and high stress. At the core of our adrenal support protocols are adaptogenic herbs, which may support proper functioning of the HPA axis and therefore healthy cortisol release. These same herbs can help support feelings of vitality and a balanced mood. Our Energy and Vitality + Rest and Relax protocols are additional options for when these are the predominant concerns.

Relax and Unwind

Relaxatone™ may temporarily relieve anxiety and stress.

Tonifiers are formulated to provide cleansing and purification of various body systems in a more gentle fashion, not causing the immediate release of cellular toxins. They are most applicable in dealing with the seriously ill or with those facing acute conditions. Drainage remedies are included in these formulations to assist the body in the expulsion of released toxins.

Rescue 5™ may temporarily relieve trauma, terror, panic, tension, fear, and the effects of startling experiences.

The term “Homeopathic Cord” (or “Chord” as some prefer to spell it) describes a homeopathically prepared remedy that consists of multiple potencies of the same single homeopathic. Some practitioners prefer this approach in the belief that the body draws upon or rotates through the various potencies on an as-needed basis. **

Stress & Adrenal Protocols

Building a balanced, multi-faceted protocol to provide an exceptional foundation for wellness is the ultimate aim of practitioners.

One way to achieve this is by remembering the three pillars of vitality: homeopathy, herbs, and nutritionals. Energique has always provided these differentiated and integrative modalities which complement one another and work at distinct levels in the body to harmoniously facilitate your wellness goals.

For more information on the three pillars of vitality contact our staff doctors at:
